

Navigating the Government Shutdown and Limited Access to Benefits

October 2025

Older LGBTQ+ people are already less likely than their heterosexual and cisgender peers to have access to safety nets that can provide needed support. With the government shutdown affecting individuals across the country, the LGBTQ+ community is particularly at risk. Navigating the limited access to benefits caused by the government shutdown can be difficult for LGBTQ+ elders due to fear of discrimination and harassment that prevent them from engaging with health and aging providers.

What a federal government shutdown means:

The federal government is currently shut down because Congress has not reached an agreement on a funding plan for the nation. The government needs to pass a budget or a temporary funding bill to continue operating. When Congress does not agree on that budget in time, some services stop or slow down. This may result in temporary disruptions to certain government programs and services.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) said in October that if the government shutdown continues, there will not be enough funding to pay the entirety of November SNAP benefits as these are allocated the month prior. Without typical funding available for November, it is unclear if all SNAP benefits will be paid, putting many across the country at risk.

During this time of uncertainty, it is important for older LGBTQ+ people to be their best advocates and be proactive about addressing the issues that arise from the government shutdown. Below are a few tips and resources you can use to develop your personalized plan for responding to limited access to benefits and navigating the government shutdown.

Navigating and securing available resources:

- Stay connected

Choose a contact person or people to stay in touch with while navigating limited access to benefits. Consider having a conversation to discuss how your experiences might be similar and to offer support if news or services become available.

- Explore community food pantries

Home delivered meals (commonly referred to as Meals on Wheels) through your local Area Agency on Aging (AAA) might be at high risk of service disruption due to the government shutdown. Consider locating a community food pantry in your area for access to meals or food supplies. Find your local food bank here:

<https://www.feedingamerica.org/find-your-local-foodbank>.

- o Once you find a pantry, contact them directly to confirm their hours of operation and eligibility. Some food banks and pantries may require proof of income, such as a tax return or pay stubs, to verify need, while others like free food markets may have no income guidelines.

- Locate a Senior Farmers Market Nutrition Program

The Senior Farmers Market Nutrition Program (SFMNP) is designed to:

- o Provide low-income seniors with access to locally grown fruits, vegetables, honey and herbs.
- o Increase the domestic consumption of agricultural commodities through farmers markets, roadside stands, and community supported agricultural programs.

To find out more about this program and locate a participating farmers market, visit <https://www.fns.usda.gov/sfmnp/program-contacts>.

- Register with a local Special Needs Registry

Many city and county governments have a Special Needs Registry where older adults and people with special needs can sign up to be contacted for safety and well-being checks by emergency personnel during times of disaster and other emergency situations. If you feel that a well-being check is necessary for you or your loved one, consider registering with your local Special Needs Registry.

- Find a local senior center or community center

You can search for your local center here: <https://eldercare.acl.gov/home>. You can also search online for "senior centers or community centers near me" or your city's name. Check your local government's website (often found with the .gov domain) as your city, town, or county government has a list of public facilities, including senior centers and community centers.

- Connect with a faith-based community if desired

If you already belong to a faith-based community, consider reaching out to ask if they have resources for community members who are navigating limited access to benefits due to the government shutdown.

- o If you are looking for a faith-based community, explore the National LGBTQ+ Task Force's list of Partners in Faith and Spirituality:

<https://www.thetaskforce.org/programs/queering-faith/partners/>. The Family Acceptance Project also has a list of Faith-Based Resources: <https://lgbtqfamilyacceptance.org/faith-based-resources/>.

- Use the 211 helpline

This confidential service can connect you with local service programs and resources. You can call 211 to find help with a wide range of needs, such as food, housing, and utility assistance. Dial 2-1-1 for free, 24/7 assistance from a local service provider; text your zip code to 898-211 to receive information via text message; visit the 211 website <https://www.211.org/> to search for resources in your area; or email help@211info.org.

- If you need emotional support, reach out to the 988 Lifeline

The 988 Suicide & Crisis Lifeline is available 24/7. Your conversations are free and confidential. Call 9-8-8, explore the 988 Lifeline website <https://988lifeline.org/>, or use the text/chat feature.

- Contact mutual aid groups

Find Mutual Aid Networks and other community self-support projects near you. Reach out to these groups directly via the map on <https://www.mutualaidhub.org/> to get involved, offer resources, or submit needs requests.

- Connect with your local library

Explore resources at your local library by reaching out to a local librarian or visiting your local library's website.

- Reach out to your elected representative

Check if your elected representatives have a Shutdown Resource Guide on their website or call your elected representative. You can locate your elected representatives at <https://www.usa.gov/elected-officials>.

The shutdown of the federal government is causing widespread uncertainty, as people across the country worry about how it will affect the services they rely on. SAGE offers a wide range of resources including:

- Local resources: SAGECollab is our national network of partner organizations. Search by state to find trusted LGBTQ+ resources in your area: <https://www.sageusa.org/advocacy-partnerships/partnerships/sagecollab/> as well as local LGBTQ+ community centers through our partner, CenterLink: <https://www.lgbtqcenters.org/LGBTCenters>.
- Financial health: SAGECents is our free financial wellness app geared toward the needs of older LGBTQ+ people. This free digital resource helps save, plan for or manage your retirement funds, reduce debt, improve your credit score, and more. Sign up today: <https://www.sageusa.org/find-support/virtual/sagecents/>.

- Community: SAGEYou is a vibrant LGBTQ+ community at your fingertips. In this online hub, you'll find an array of free virtual programs that you can access wherever you are. Visit the resource library for information and guidance around LGBTQ+ aging-related topics: <https://sageyou.org/>.

SAGE hopes that during this time of uncertainty due to the government shutdown older LGBTQ+ people can continue to stay connected to local resources and the larger SAGE community.